

MULTI-MEDIA TRAINING INSTITUTE, INC.

in partnership with

The New York City Black Film Exhibitors Alliance (NYC BFEA)

present

...takes its viewers on a historical journey that depicts the economic transition of 125th Street from the late 1960s to present day. This is a story that takes an introspective look at the changing face of the most well known African-American neighborhood and examines a complexity of issues that surround a community in peril!

The first in a series of cutting edge film screenings, live on-line streamed film critiques and review sessions:

Harlem's Mart 125:
The American Dream

will be featured

Saturday, Jan. 30, 2010
at Studio W, 628 W Street, NE Washington, DC at 6:30 pm

followed by a discussion on gentrification and urban redevelopment not only in Harlem but especially in Washington, DC and other urban centers around the country.
There is no charge for admission but donations are accepted.

*Beginning in January 2010
on the last Saturday of each month, MMTI and NYCBFEA will host dynamic evenings that include film, sometimes live performances in addition to fine foods and beverages at Studio W.*
